Birth and pregnancy are events full of magic, but also drama. Although all of us go through that part of life, no one is able to remember how it really was to be inside our mother's womb. To which extent can fetuses experience what's going on outside the womb? We wanted to explore the contrast between the calmness inherent in the womb and the complex reality that awaits outside. We decided to put ourselves inside the bodies of pregnant women and offer a first-hand experience to 're-imagine' our current conception of pregnancy and birth. In Birth & Pregnancy, the user is inside a pregnant woman's body, using his/her head to explore the environment and the woman's body, see and hear people, events and the whole world passing by. The introduction of the stillbirth mortality rate of 3-5% per childbirth and a population-adjusted rate of 8.2-8.5% contributed to a call for improvements in obstetrics. This virtual reality film shows the birth process through the first trimester of a mother's pregnancy and shows you the cord being cut, the baby appearing and the first moments of life.
