-> Free for one month -> VR Play -> All buildings in ancient Rome -> The most realistic VR Roman experience! Since 2017, from November to February, thousands of children and adults will be able to climb Mount Everest! You can be a part of this massive experience, where you will see the base camp of Mount Everest, live the action and transport the Sherpa who guides to the high snowline. You can even spend time in the research and production area of Base Camp and Himalaya, where the Sherpas find their route to the summit and return to their families. Sherpas are the people who carry the heavy things and are the key to the success of the expedition to the summit. You are now in the third season of the exciting documentary series "UltimateTrek." In this third season, you will experience the extraordinary adventure of crossing the Mount Everest and return to the capital and celebrate, because you can live the trip of Sherpa (Nepalese guide) in a private tour! The road to the summit of Mount Everest has a long history. For centuries, it has been a dream of the world's best mountaineers. During the Chinese Qilai Jia and the Nepalese of J.P. Mallory, they dreamed of climbing the highest peak, the only one which reaches to the heavens in our times. In 2003, this goal became reality, and the first direct crossing of Mount Everest was achieved, when the Nepalese Pasang Lhamu Sherpa was the first man to have climbed to the top. After the success of the first cross of Mount Everest, many more adventurers wanted to repeat this success. In the last ten years, a number of people have been crossing the peak, not only Nepalese climbers, but also South Koreans, Americans, Spaniards, Japanese and even British. Next to them, a British team (Sir Chris Bonington, Mike Troughton and Tim Emmett) tried to cross the peak, but they died during the attempt. Currently, there are more than 20 expeditions every year going to the mountain. But even more than this, there are many thousands of people every year who do not go on a real expedition, but instead of these trips they go to the base camp of Mount Everest and they experience what it means to be a Sherpa, experiencing life in the fortress and lives among the living of the Everest. And the Sherpa live as they have always lived. They

-message begins- Welcome to the F90 Walker! The F90 Walker is a rugged, proven, high-reliability, mobile operating system that powers everything from spacecraft construction to the movements of machinery and equipment. Our early development began with studying the idiosyncrasies of a broken door hinge and a fallen flag pole. Later, we developed multi-faceted, purpose-built software tools for analyzing system components, with an eye toward creating the most beneficial and efficient systems. The F90 Walker now has access to 60 years' worth of engineering and production expertise to ensure that our flagship robot remains one of the most reliable and effective, in the field, of its class. The F90 Walker Control Terminal allows full object manipulation capability. Using a magnetic tether and workstation control interfaces, the F90 Walker can perform a wide variety of tasks and functions. -message ends- Specifics About This Game: F90 Walker Control Terminal Single Player: Yes Number of Players: Single Number of Players: Open Number of Rooms: 1 Current Score: Number of Walls: 3 Expected Length: ~100m Movement Speed: -message begins- The player's new interface informs him that the walker must be reprogrammed to operate on its internal power sources. What's new:

In September of this year I was in the US prison system. My destination was Fulton County Jail in Atlanta. I had been convicted of burglary in a Mississippi court back in January and was transferred to Georgia. I had been held in an Atlanta jail, but my family told me that I was headed to Fulton County because it is one of the more brutal of the Georgia prisons. When I arrived, I had signed a paper designating Fulton as the location of my future home. I knew the odds of making it into a halfway house were low, so I was trying to prepare myself for the worst. When I entered I was put in a cell with a large prisoner named Robert. He was clean-cut and sporting full gray hair and a pleasant face. He smiled at me and immediately I knew we would get along. We never had a chance. At the time, Fulton County Jail was pretty much the equivalent of what you would find in Mississippi or Alabama. It was hot and uncomfortable. The inmates were crammed into cells with one to three other people. There was little privacy. And the guards were shot-caller types. On the third day, Robert yelled that he was going to pass out. He had been pacing through the cell block for a long time. I asked him if the reason for his pacing was because he was about to pass out or because he didn't want any more questions about Georgia state prisons. He said he would pass out one way or another. As soon as he closed his eyes I made myself comfortable and tried not to think about my current situation. To be more precise, I tried to not think about the bills, insurance bills and all the other expenses that I had been accumulating during the last 2 ½ years I spent in New York City and I sure as hell did not want to think about my future. I knew something was going to come out. I knew I couldn't last all the way to Georgia with no food. When my stomach settled after about six hours I told him I was going to take my cell phone. When I handed it over, Robert said it was against the rules for us to have phones in here. He said that I didn't belong in a prison and that if I was lucky my family would be able to pick me up. My mind was racing, so I searched for a way that I could respond that was not confrontational. I told him his situation was his worst enemy. "If you change your life

I'm on the way to the early morning meeting, the morning client debriefing meeting, making rounds in the AMI office, running the AMI safe house, and making reports about what we are doing in the AMI office. I am supervising two other associates, and I teach classes. I lead a walk in meditation group. I am the base-camp for the team. No wonder my days seem kind of crazy, especially the mornings. I always think of something that can't wait, but it turns out it always can. "How did this all happen?" I ask myself early each morning. "I never expected to be an assistant minister. How did this happen?" Out of all of the blessings and challenges of being a staff minister, out of all the good people, out of all
